Donald V. Adams
Leadership Institute

The Institute

provides students a sequential three-part leadership training series, designed to equip them with self-awareness, collaboration, and perspective-taking skills that are immediately applicable to their personal relationships, academic coursework, and professional lives. This co-curricular leadership opportunity is available to students from all academic disciplines and majors at no cost thanks to the generous support of Drake alumni and friends of Dr. Donald V. Adams, Professor Emeritus.

Adams Leadership Training Series

- 1 Personal Practices of Leadership
This introductory training equips you with skills and practices that build personal wellbeing as a foundation from which to lead effectively. Create a leadership action plan and develop habits, routines, and relationships that make your life worth following.
- 2 Leadership in Action
Utilizing Strengths-Based Leadership™, you'll develop self-awareness, identify talents, and apply your unique strengths to personal and professional contexts. Learn valuable skills in communication and collaboration through interactive sessions led by campus and community leaders.
- 3 The Leadership Launch
Reflect back upon your Drake experience, gain feedback and perspective about your leadership skills, and develop an intentional plan for how to apply that learning to post-graduate life.

This program has helped me articulate what moments have been most impactful in developing me into the leader and individual I am today. I felt prepared and confident going into interviews post-graduation and could explain the importance of my leadership experiences, the skills I have learned, and how Drake played a role in molding me into the leader I am today.
