

Drake University Law School

Handbook Supplement

2017-2018

The following Handbook changes have been approved and will be incorporated into the Handbook at the end of the Spring 2018 term.

January 26, 2017

5.1.1 A.B.A. STANDARD 310 POLICY

The amount of work that reasonably approximates a “credit hour” at Drake University Law School constitutes one “hour” (defined as 50 minutes) of classroom instruction and two hours of expected out-of-class student work per week for fifteen weeks including exam time, or an equivalent amount of time in courses that do not require an exam but instead require more intensive out-of-class work such as seminars and skills courses. The Associate Dean shall review course syllabi to assure that each course fulfills the credit hour requirement. The following five descriptions of types of courses more fully set forth the amount of work contemplated. Note that there is no need for further description as to clinical and internship courses, all of which require the students to keep time records.

1. Regular Classroom Course

Reading and studying at least the standard average of fifteen pages per 50 minutes of instruction; OR reading and studying less material because it is more difficult, is statute-intensive, or involves foundational concepts that must be studied at length. In addition, as applicable in a particular course, doing any of the following: completing written assignments or problems, contributing to an on-line forum, completing interactive tutorials or computer-assisted instruction, preparing for and taking quizzes, including mid-term exams, participating in study groups, and studying for the final exam.

2. Seminar Course

The same as for a Regular Classroom Course as applicable, and in addition, as applicable in a particular course: researching a paper or papers, writing drafts of a paper or papers, meeting with the professor for feedback on draft(s), revising draft(s), writing the final version(s), preparing for an in-class presentation, and making an in-class presentation.

3. Non-Clinical Skills Course

The same as for a Regular Classroom Course as applicable, and in addition, as applicable in a particular course: reading and studying assigned case files, reading and studying assigned material other than case files or problems, researching law applicable to assigned case files, writing documents related to assigned case files, revising documents related to assigned case files, holding practice sessions, consulting with other students, dealing with persons who are roleplaying clients, witnesses, etc., and consulting with the instructor.

4. Mock Trial or Moot Court Course

Reading and studying assigned case files, researching law applicable to assigned case files, writing documents related to assigned case files, revising written documents related to assigned case files, holding practice sessions, consulting with fellow team members, consulting with the team coach or advisor, and participating in competition(s).

5. Law Journal Course

Researching for the student's journal Note, writing the Note, meetings between editors and junior staff regarding notes, reviewing article submissions, editing/spading accepted submissions, and performing other editorial duties.

April 20, 2017:

9.1.3 RETAKING COURSES

Students who receive a "D+" or below in a required course must retake the course and receive a grade higher than a "D+" in order to graduate. Students retaking a required course may only retake the course one time. When a student is required to retake a course under this rule, the student must enroll in the course in the next spring or fall semester in which that course is offered. In compelling circumstances, the Associate Dean may allow a student to retake the course in a later semester. This rule does not prevent a student from retaking the required course if it is offered in the summer. In addition, ordinarily, a student will be required to retake the course with a different professor from the one with whom the student took the original class, unless the Assistant or Associate Dean decides otherwise. The grade received in the initial taking of the class, as well as the grade earned in retaking the class, will be calculated into the student's grade point average. (amendment effective beginning with Fall 2016 grades)

April 20, 2017:

5.1.1 "WRITING ACROSS THE CURRICULUM"

In each upper-level course with an enrollment of 30 or fewer students, the instructor will include at least one short writing assignment with meaningful feedback. This rule does not apply to clinic, skills, internships, and Advanced Writing Requirement courses. These short writing assignments should be in the nature of documents a recent graduate would be expected to draft, such as a letter to a client, a memo to a partner, a motion, a contract clause, etc.

Rewrites will be required for all students whose work does not meet or exceed the writing outcome requirements for the "developing" level as defined in the official Law School rubric, or the equivalent level in any successor rubric.

The writing assignment will count toward a student's grade in the manner the instructor deems appropriate. (Effective Fall 2017)

August 24, 2017:

9.1.1 (c) SPECIAL ACADEMIC STATUS

A student whose CGPA is between 2.0 and 2.3 will not be permitted to participate in a leadership position in extra or co-curricular activities unless the student obtains a waiver of this rule from the Assistant Dean

(such a waiver will not allow the same student to be a leader of more than one organization at a time), must have their schedules approved by the Associate Dean or Assistant Dean for Academic Services and must attend PLA in the spring semester of the 1L year. These students will be considered “in good standing” and no notation of special status will be made on their transcript.

September 21, 2017:

The following language will be added with regard to students switching from MJ or Professional Certificate program to JD program:

5.9 SCHOLARSHIP FOR DRAKE MJ OR CERTIFICATE HOURS

If a student earned at least six credits in law school courses towards an MJ or professional certificate, and the student is later accepted into the JD program, the law school will provide a one-time scholarship for the JD program for the amount the student paid for six law school MJ or professional certificate credits. This scholarship would be granted in addition to any other scholarship but the combined scholarships may not exceed the cost of tuition.

An MJ or professional certificate program student who takes and earns at least a B in a law school course that is required for the JD degree will not be required to retake that course. Although credit towards the JD degree will not be given for the course taken before matriculation in the JD program, the professional certificate or MJ course may count towards requirements of law school certificate programs.

September 21, 2017:

6.6 ADD POLICY

For a course that lasts more than seven weeks, a student may not add the course after the second week of class. For a course that lasts seven weeks or less, but more than two weeks, a student may not add the course after the first week of class. For a course that lasts two weeks or less, a student may not add the course after the second class period has begun. After the first day of the term, non-clinical skills courses may only be added with the permission of the faculty member teaching the course. The Associate Dean may permit adds after the periods specified above, but only for good cause.
