 PROGRAM OVERVIEW:

- 150–170 undergraduates with a diverse range of interests and experiences
- Interdisciplinary course of study
- Areas of expertise: Political Economy; Public Policy; Law and Rhetoric; the Supreme Court; Race, Gender and Law; Social Movements and Legal Mobilization; Drugs, Law, and Society; Policing; Employment Law and Labor History; and Law and Markets.

LPS FACULTY:

- Renee Ann Cramer, Ph.D. in Politics, New York University
- William Garriott, Ph.D. in Anthropology, Princeton University, M.T.S., Harvard Divinity School
- Nathaniel Holdren, Ph.D. in History, University of Minnesota

AFFILIATED FACULTY:

- Rachel Caufield, Department of Politics
- William Lewis, Department of Study of Culture and Society
- Joanna Mosser, Department of Politics

MAJOR REQUIREMENTS:

- Introduction to Law, Politics, and Society [LPS]
- Critical Concepts in LPS
- LPS Perspectives on Constitutional Law
- Senior Seminar
- Four LPS-designated courses. e.g.: Law and Slavery; Reproductive Law and Politics; Drugs, Law, and Society; Crime and Film; Uncomfortable Transactions; American Indian Law and Politics;
- Outside LPS: Two lower division and four upper division courses in related disciplines (Politics, History, Rhetoric, etc.)

EMPHASIS ON:

- Experiential Learning through Internships, Research, Service Learning, Study Away
- Global and multicultural understandings and perspectives
- Interdisciplinary approaches to learning

LPS GRADUATES:

After Drake (percentages are approximate)...

- 60% go directly to Law School
- 30% enter workforce (e.g. social service, non-profit sector, government, politics, journalism, or business)
- 10% go to graduate programs (e.g. MPA, MBA, MSW, Ed)