

Tough Cases: Judges Tell the Stories of Some of the Hardest Decisions They've Ever Made

In Tough Cases, by Russell Canan, Gregory Mize, and Frederick Weisberg, Superior and District court judges from different parts of the country write about the case that proved most difficult for them to decide. Join us online as some of these judges share the stories behind their decisions.

Session 1: Wednesday, July 14 Noon-1:30 p.m.

"Rough Justice"* Judge Russell F. Canan

Faced with the real possibility that a defendant will be found guilty by a jury, Judge Canan struggles with how to navigate a harsh mandatory sentence, unjust under the facts.

"Building Justice in Kosovo"* Judge Edward S. Wilson

Assigned as an international judge by the United Nations, Judge Wilson will talk about his experience presiding over criminal cases in a country that had not fully embraced the rule of law.

Session 2: Wednesday, July 21 Noon-1:30 p.m.

"Every Case is a Tough Case for a New Judge"* Judge Michelle M. Ahnn

Judge Ahnn will speak about the transition from being a public defender advocating for her clients, to presiding over a criminal misdemeanor case.

"Brave Jenny"* Judge Gregory E. Mize

Judge Mize discusses his handling of an emotionally charged case of child neglect.
