Course description: This writing and critical thinking course will cover the development of the blues in the US throughout the 20th century. This course examines the historic, geographic, social, and cultural concepts associated with American Blues music. Additionally, this class will explore the various musical styles and the disseminations and marketing of the genre. Finally, students in the class will grapple with how the blues is relevant today and think about lessons we can learn from this form of music. The class will feature various guest speakers/musicians to share why Blues music is important to them and you will think and write deeply in a way to make sense of the blues....for you.

The SKILLS required to pass this class...will help you COMPLETE your program at Drake.

We are going to write in this class. Your writing has to make a contribution to the class and our project. I am going to assess your critical thinking via your writing. Write to learn....learn to write.

Definitions

Learning to write: the game we play for publication (formal writing)

Writing to learn: a process to guide thinking/learning process in small steps

Many students start college, not all will finish their college plan. The four most important skills you will need to develop with a growth-mindset are: critical thinking, writing, information literacy, and professional habits.

Project Based Learning is real world activity.

As opposed to classes where your final product will only be seen by the professor, I've designed this class so that your final product (chapter/book) will have value outside the classroom via a public audience. The Authentic Intellectual Work (AIW) model: 1. student construction of knowledge, 2. through in-depth inquiry 3. to create a product that has value outside the classroom will guide this class.

Recursive writing and thinking is real life.

Learn by doing.

I don't think it is possible to learn, I mean really learn, about the blues by reading a book. That's why I've designed this course in a way that allows us to experience the blues. We are going to hear the blues, in a live music venue, so we can understand the nuances, style, and subtleties. We will have critical conversations with blues players (in class and for the class project). And we will think deeply about the blues by writing recursively, so we can cultivate our ideas into complex and thoughtful ideas.

The learning is the most important. Take time to think about your development/learning as opposed to your grade in the class.**

Standards based assessment.

There is no “point chasing” in this class. Twenty percent of your grade will not be based on participation. In the end, you will be assessed on how well you demonstrate proficiency in four/five standards that are relevant to your success here at Drake. Straight-forward and simple.

Grades should not be the motivation for success in this class. Learning and developing your skills should be the motivation for success in this class.

Standards Based Grading Procedure

Standards based grading is a philosophy that uses the gradebook to communicate students’ strengths and weakness relative to the learning standards, or big ideas, or the course. The instructor will use various formative assessment techniques prior to using a summative assessment for each standard. Practice assignments, homework, attendance, good behavior, brown-nosing or class participation will not directly be included in the final grade.

Students will receive two grades in this class: one for academics and one for professional habits.

Definitions

Summative assessment: the assignment that count as a final grade in the grade book.

Formative assessment: the assignments that help you develop the skills to become proficient (meet the standard) on the summative assessment.

Generally, a component of SBG is multiple opportunities to demonstrate proficiency. These will be offered at the student’s request and with a plan for learning and if student has shown proficiency in the Professional Habits standard/matrix.

An important part of SBG is formative feedback/assessment. The more time and effort you put into a formative project, the more time and effort I will give providing formative feedback. The instructor is not a proof-reader/editor. That is your responsibility.

Grades are communication, not compensation

Simply “doing the work” of the class, does not ensure an A (compensation model). Your job is to demonstrate that you are proficient in the content of the course. The grade you receive will communicate where you stand in relation to the standards of the course.

There will be various standards assessments in this class, this will be your opportunity to show the instruction what you learned or know relative to the standard. On each final assessment, the student will be assigned one of the following marks:

4=advanced

3=proficient (meets the standard)

2=emerging (doesn't meet the standard yet)

1=not there

0=no effort

The professor will evaluate students on the academic standards to come up with the final grade.

A (PROFICIENT) high quality, university-level work (must be proficient in all 5 standards)

B (EMERGING) high quality university-level work (proficient in 4 standards)

C (Not there yet) good quality university-level work (proficient in 3 standards)

D (Not there yet) acceptable university-level student work (proficient in 1-2 standards)

F (No effort) incomplete or missing work

The Course Standards

- 1. College level paragraph
- 2. College level essay
- 3. Critical thinking
- 4. Information Literacy

5. Blues knowledge

PH – Professional Habits

Standard 1: Students will demonstrate they can write a college level paragraph

Summative assessment: Students will watch a video and use the recursive writing strategies learning in class to write a college level paragraph that has a clear concise topic sentence and 4-5 supporting sentences (Make a claim, support your claim).

Formative work: Robert Johnson story, BB King at Cook County Jail, in class practice.

Standard 2: Students will demonstrate they can write a college level essay

Summative assessment: Students will write a piece that contributes to the class project (book) using the criteria set forth by the instructor. The chapter will be assessed via the writing rubric provided in appendix of syllabus. Chapters that are assessed as Proficient (meets the standard) will be included in the final book.

The topic of this book: Iowa Blues Hall of Fame

As a class, we will generate a list of questions to ask the participants. Each student will interview one member of the Central Iowa Blues Society for their book chapter. The Instructor will help you decide who to interview.

Writing Workshop---Required--All students will participant in two 30 minute writing workshop sessions. You are able sign up at: <http://library.drake.edu/writing>.

NO-No shows. Please bring a copy of the assignment along with your draft when you visit your writing coach.

Do NOT skip your session...I will hear about it.....and I don't want to hear about it!!! This is a professional habit and responsibility of yours.

Sign up for writing workshop sessions during the weeks mentioned below.

Arrange for interviews to take place (via phone call): Sept 13- Sept 20

Interviews will take place: Oct 1-10

Academic Dishonesty: Academic dishonesty encompasses any activity that seeks to gain credit for work one has not done, provide assistance to others seeking to gain such credit, or deliberately damage or destroy the work of others. Academic dishonesty includes, but is not limited to, (1) Plagiarism: misrepresenting another's ideas, phrases, discourse, or work as one's own; (2) Cheating: the act, or attempted act, of giving or obtaining aid or information by illicit means in meeting any academic requirements, including examinations.

The penalty for plagiarism, cheating and other forms of academic dishonesty will vary from incident to incident, depending upon the scope and magnitude of the offense and the circumstances in which it occurred. Possible penalties include any of the following: reprimand, dismissal from the course with a failing grade, probation, suspension, and/or dismissal from the University.

Course Evaluation/Assessment Content:

Students will be provided the opportunity to evaluate the course and the instructor via the School of Education evaluation format.

Technology Required:

Students must have access to and be able to use a personal computer with Microsoft Word, have access to the Web and have a Drake e-mail account.

Expectations of Technology: Laptops are an important tool for learning in this class. However, surfing the web for topics unrelated to the class content (Facebook, check email, twitter, scores, shopping) during class time is a barrier to learning and participation and is disrespectful to the instructor and the class. This includes texting. Developing your professional focus (and discipline) on the task at hand (not being tempted to check your social media every 3 minutes) will benefit you and give you credibility as an employee.

Be present in class. Please turn off your phone.

Expectation of Attendance: You are expected to attend class.

Special Needs Considerations: Students who require accommodations for special needs should contact the instructor before classes start.

Appendix A

AIW (Authentic Intellectual Work)

A lesson guided by AIW has several key components including: (1) student construction of knowledge, (2) disciplined inquiry, and (3) value beyond school (Newmann, et al., 2007). Authentic Intellectual Work helps to move a lesson forward by moving away from the rote memorization and passive reception of information to a much more engaging lesson for learners involving deeper contextual issues (Scheuerell, 2011). Rather than just routine application of facts and procedures, AIW involves original application of knowledge and skills. It also entails careful study of a particular topic or problem and results in a product or presentation that has meaning beyond success in school (Carmichael & Martens, 2012). Students begin to make meaning by constructing their own knowledge around an idea or question and then explore solutions in the same way that professionals and experts in the field do (Carmichael & Martens, 2012).

Appendix B

is self-guided, self-disciplined thinking which attempts to reason at the highest level of quality in a fair-minded way. People who think critically consistently attempt to live rationally, reasonably and empathically. They are keenly aware of the inherently flawed nature of human thinking when left unchecked. They strive to diminish the power of their egocentric and sociocentric tendencies. They use the intellectual tools that critical thinking offers – concepts and principles that enable them to analyze, assess, and improve thinking. They work diligently to develop the intellectual virtues of intellectual integrity, intellectual humility, intellectual civility, intellectual empathy, intellectual sense of justice and confidence in reason. They realize that no matter how skilled they are as thinkers, they can always improve their reasoning abilities and they will at times fall prey to mistakes in reasoning, human irrationality, prejudices, biases, distortions, uncritically accepted social rules and taboos, self-interest, and vested interest.

They strive to improve the world in whatever ways they can and contribute to a more rational, civilized society. At the same time, they recognize the complexities often inherent in doing so. They strive never to think simplistically about complicated issues and always to consider the rights and needs of relevant others. They recognize the complexities in developing as thinkers, and commit themselves to life-long practice toward self-improvement. They embody the Socratic principle: The unexamined life is not worth living, because they realize that many unexamined lives together result in an uncritical, unjust, dangerous world."
